Jackson is an associate attorney in Zelle's Atlanta office, where his practice primarily focuses on representing global insurance companies in all stages of litigation surrounding first-party property insurance claims. His practice includes researching and providing in-depth analysis on simple to complex coverage issues. He also has experience in other areas of litigation, particularly in pre-suit investigation, motion practice, discovery, trial, and settlement.

Prior to joining Zelle, Jackson spent several years with Downey & Cleveland, LLP, an insurance defense litigation firm located in Marietta, Georgia. There, Jackson represented numerous clients throughout northern Georgia, and tried multiple cases to jury verdict. Jackson received his J.D. from Mercer University School of Law in 2020. During law school, Jackson served as the Eleventh Circuit Survey Editor for the Mercer Law Review.
